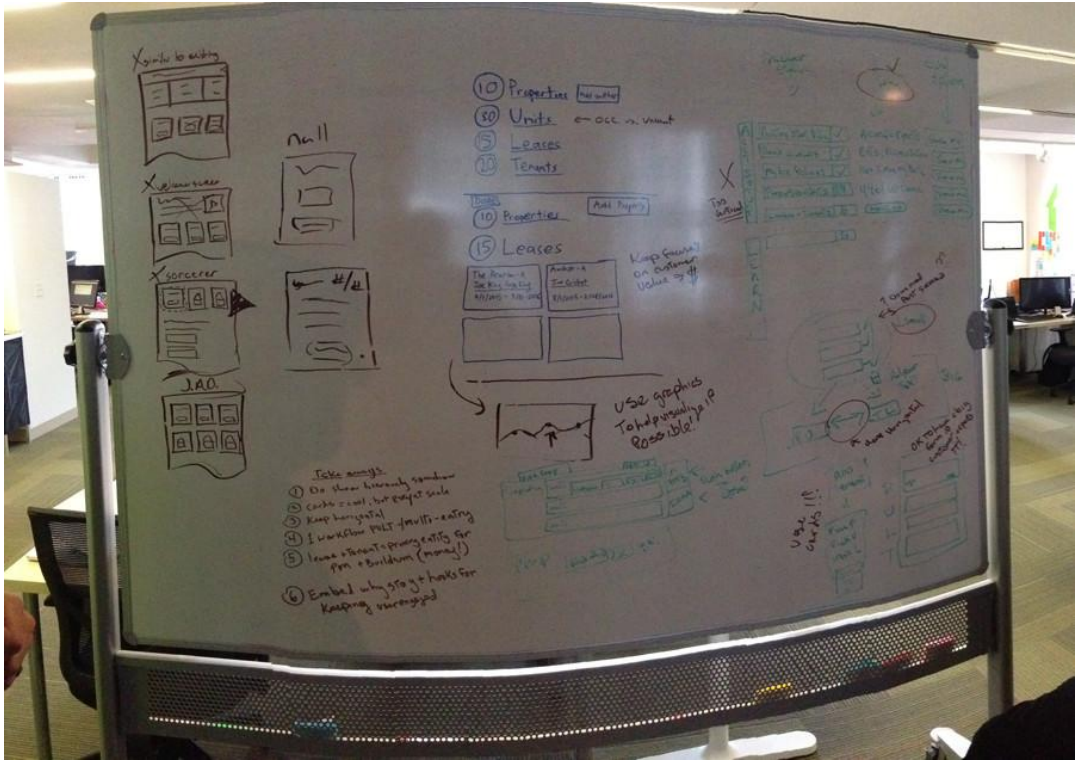
SaaS Product Onboarding at a High Growth Startup

New Buildium customers were dumped onto an empty dashboard with no idea how to get started.

Solution

1. Improve users' commitment to get started by increasing yearly subscriptions.
2. Guide users through a setup process that helps them configure settings and enter data.
3. Reduce the effort and complexity of onboarding by streamlining the existing workflow.



Results

1. Increased the percentage of users who sign up for yearly plans from ~12% to ~31%.
2. Retained more new customers by reducing churn for a reason of “too hard to use” from ~30% to ~18%.
3. Simplified from 17 screens spread across the application to 7 screens in a unified workflow.

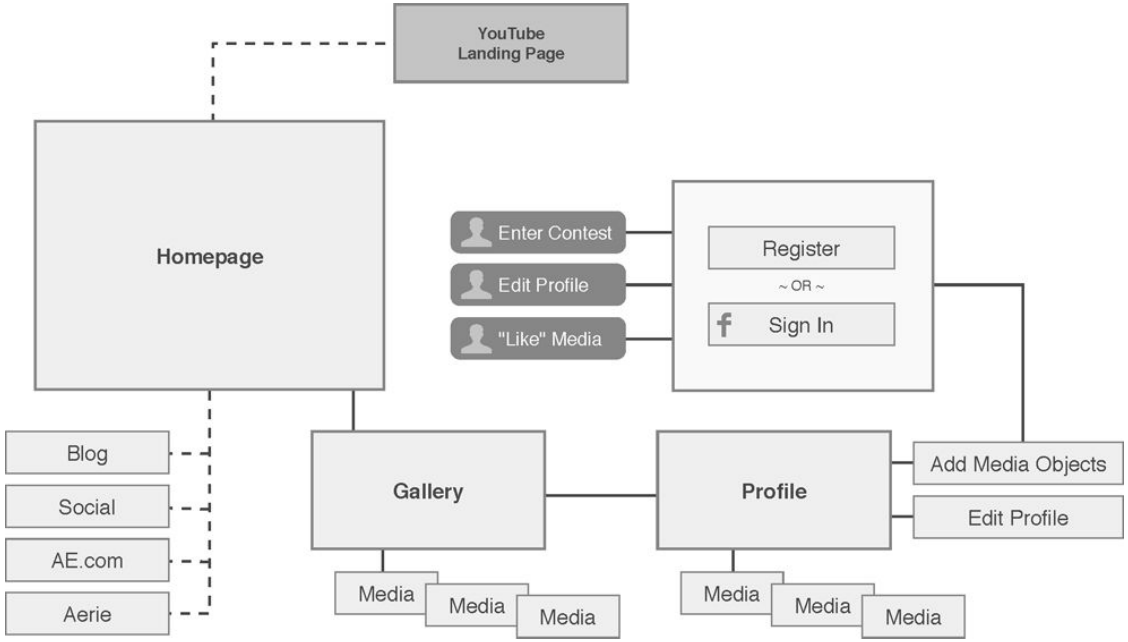
A Lean Contest Platform for a Large Consumer Brand

American Eagle was in sore need of a powerful yet simple platform for running model contests online.

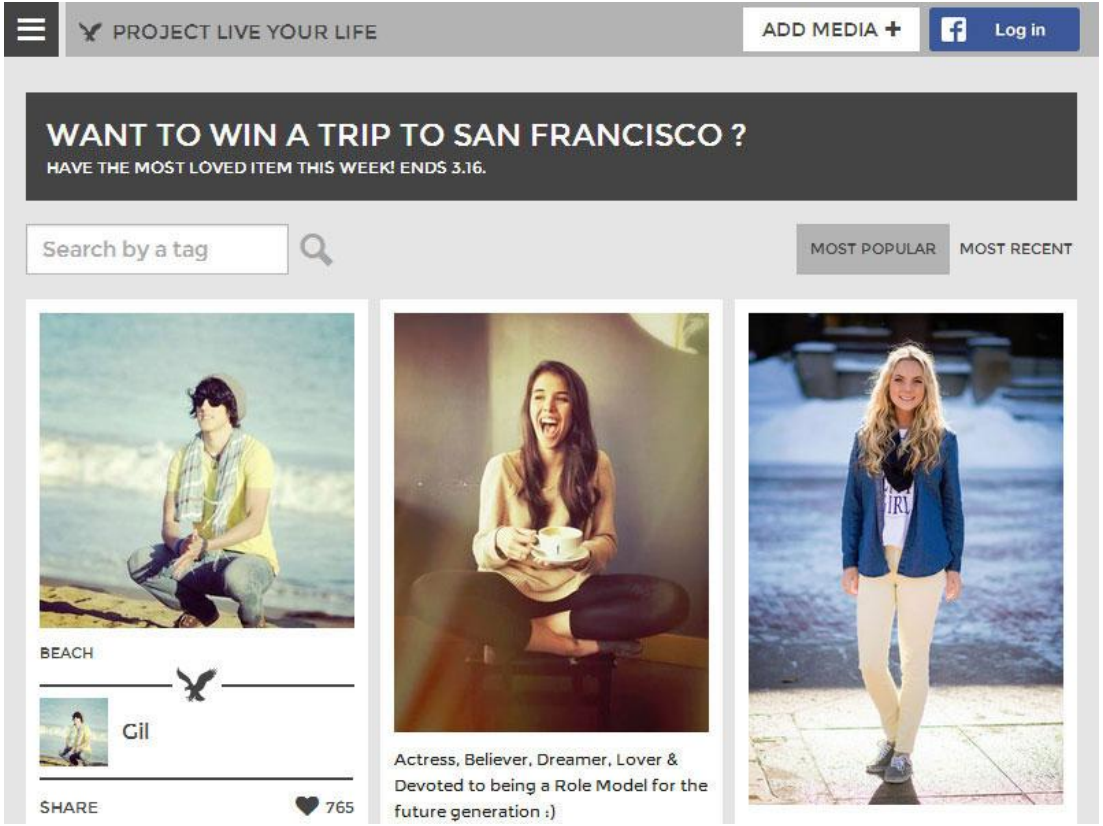
Solution

1. Minimize the barriers for users to register, upload, and vote.
2. Promote engagement by focusing on photo content first.
3. Build a flexible tagging system and interface that serves both users and admins.



Results

1. User registration crushed the previous year's multi-week contest in just two days (over 11,000 profiles created).
2. During those two days, users also surpassed the previous contest's total by casting 80,000 votes for their favorite photos.
3. Client admins ran the overall contest plus weekly contests with almost no technical help.



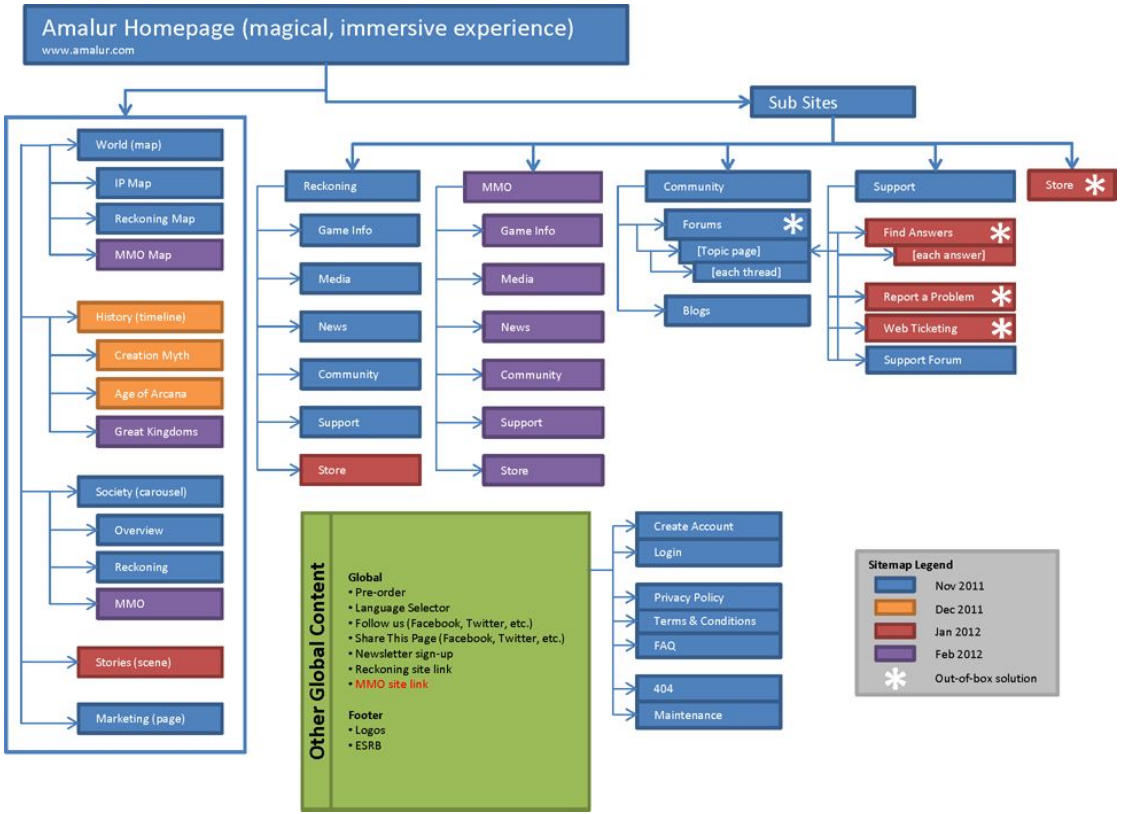
A New World

10,000 Years of Made-up History on the Web

38 Studios needed to build an audience for a new fantasy world prior to the flagship game launch.

Solution

1. Blend the arts of storytelling and technology to create an immersive experience.
2. Deliver informative content that fulfills the brand promise of a deep fantasy world.
3. Draw fans into a living world by releasing a steady stream of engaging updates.



Results

1. With no advertising, Amalur.com was visited by more than 200,000 unique visitors over the course of six months.
2. Users averaged about three minutes per page for each visit and up to six minutes on long-form content pages.
3. Over 35,000 words of illustrated content updates were written, edited, and published.
